Last Laugh

Dear Reader,

Welcome. Welcome to the first issue of LLGT Cafe April 2023 edition, which, Lord willing, will be out each month. The first issue is free, as I am working out the details. I hope to offer the May issue as a PDF and a print issue.

LLGT is a conglomeration of other ideas that came and went or came and died – some of them a bitter death.

If you had to give my story a title it would be “But God.” I was headed in the wrong direction and, only God knows where that road might have taken me. I might not still be alive had God not met me at the age of 14 and, by the witness of two, turned my life around. I will not say that my life after Christ has been easy by any means. In fact, parts of it, I wouldn’t wish on anyone. But, over the years God has revealed more and more of Himself to me: with that, more of His love for me.

There is so much to starting a business. I tried several times to start a business while living in northern Idaho and those attempts served as a learning experience, mostly of what not to do. I’m still learning, but I’ve been making progress since restarting my blog in October 2022.

My first cover photo and cover story is a revisit with Carla D’Addesi, who owns a clothing company in Pennsylvania. That business uses part of its profits to support pro-life. And that is why I contacted D’Addesi to see if she would agree to an interview.

I plan to have other interviews, recipes as well as other articles in each issue of LLGT Cafe. The goal of www.llgt.cafe is to be a safe place that families and individuals can go each day and find something of value.

It is a Christ centered website and I hope that its magazine will follow also be God honoring.

I believe that life should be fun, not because we do something fun every day, but because we have a good God, one that loves us. You can find out more about having a relationship with this God on the website.

My goal isn’t to sell you anything, though you may find opportunity to use some of the affiliate links in this magazine. My prayer is that you will build a stronger relationship with God through Jesus and the Holy Spirit.

Let me know if you have any questions. I would love to hear from you, even if you have criticism. I promise I won’t cry – much.

Love,
Ralph and Rolf the Dawg

COL1972

In October 2019, I had the opportunity to publish an article on COL1972, a clothing company in Pennsylvania that, in 2019 was less than a year old. Col stands for Culture Of Life and the year 1972 is the year when abortion became legal in the United States of America. COL1972 uses part of its profits to support mothers who decide against abortion but need financial or other help with their pregnancy.

“The supreme court ruled that our tiniest Americans could be denied the right to life,” said Carla D’Addesi, in our first interview. “Since 1973, 60 million American children have been denied the right to life,” continued D’Addesi. “We hope to return to a culture of life and that year 1972, which symbolizes when all life mattered.”

COL1972 still sells women’s clothing, men’s clothing, and jewelry through their online store. The clothing and jewelry are designed by D’Addesi and her three daughters.

The original LLGT website was closed but returned in October of 2022. Recently, I contacted D'Addesi to see if she would do another interview and she agreed.

"My daughters and I created the name COL1972," said D'Addesi. "It is a great conversational piece; people ask all the time what does COL 1972 mean. This gives us the opportunity to share that 1972 was the last year we enjoyed a culture of life in the United States of America."

In 2019, COL1972 D'Addesi was running the business with the help of her three daughters. "My husband (my daughters dad) helps on occasion. We have a fulfillment center that packages and ships all our items. We have a web designer. But my daughters and I do all the marketing and designing of our brand on a mission." Now, COL1972, after a few years of slow and steady growth has been able to add two part-time employees.

"My three daughters still work for the company although my oldest is now a first year law student and our middle daughter is a second year nursing student, my baby who is now a senior in high school is enjoying Liberty University online Academy, and is really a huge help to Culture Of Life 1972."

In the October 2019 interview, D'Addesi said that she and her daughters came up with the name for business. I asked D'Addesi if she had considered changing the name of her business since the overturn of Roe V. Wade. "We considered changing the name of our business after June 24, 2022 decision, however we decided to just incorporate some 2022 styles and jewelry items. Our life tribe is wearing the 1972 and 2022 pieces together it really shares a wonderful story about the culture of life and our country."

"After much discussion in prayer we decided to keep 1972 and incorporate 2022 as the year 1972 is still a historical moment for the culture of life tribe. Our country had 50 dark years between 1972-2022. May we strive to win a culture of life in all 50 States today."

D'Addesi says that her customer tends to be "conservative stylish woman who wants USA made products that giveback to life. We have business casual, bump-friendly for our moms and comfy clothes for our homeschoolers."

When asked what she might have done differently, D'Addes said, "I would not have wasted money in a business consultant. I learned that I can learn everything that I need for my online boutique on YouTube. I would not have wasted money advertising in fancy Christian Magazines. Posting for free on all our social media got more sales and growth than paying for fancy ads."

What advice would D'Addesi give to anyone wanting to start a similar business? "Pray about your new business and speak to others that have a successful business that you desire to have. Successful business owners advice is priceless. They are always willing to share with someone who desires to learn. Be patient, 2023 is our 5th year in business. We just finished our 4th year. Be patient! Businesses take time. Don't believe a person who tells you that you should be hitting these numbers or have this many followers by year one. Slow and steady wins the race!"

D'Addesi compares her customers to family, saying, "We get thank you notes often. They also share their dreams and fears with us. We love them and we hope we have earned their respect and love. Even if you never purchase with us again, we are praying for you and we ask you keep us in your prayers."

"I was asked to speak about COL1972 at Liberty University Convocation in February 2020," said D'Addesi. "This is the largest gathering of Christians weekly. I was honored to speak to 15,000 students live and was streamed live to 1 million viewers. Liberty invited us to do a fashion show for 500 students the following day. This opened the door for other similar events."

COL1972 gives majority of our 10% back to life turning point in Philadelphia and Blue Ridge Pregnancy Center in Lynchburg, Va. in previous years we have divided our fun – sometimes to over 50 pregnancy centers and pro-life causes."

D'Addesi says that she is very involved with her church. "We enjoy a small group each Sunday evening." D'Addesi also enjoys tennis and skiing as a family. "Our extended family all live in our state so I am very busy with nieces and nephews activities as well. Faith, family and you can also say fashion is everything to me."

"My daughters had a brilliant idea to purchase a Jeep that they had wrapped pink cheetah with our logo," said D'Addesi. "We needed something to transport inventory for pop-up shops and fashion shows. It brings a smile to people's faces even those who don't know who we are. God thing."

April in History

Michael King, Jr. was born on January 15, 1929, Atlanta, Georgia. Michael, who was one of three children, was born to Martin Luther King Sr. and Alberta (Williams) King.

Michale's first name was changed to Martin at the age of six. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s father was a pastor and his mother, a school teacher.

After hight school, King attended Morehouse College, where he receiving his bachelor's degree in 1948, before attending Crozer Theological Seminary in Chester, Pennsylvania.

On August 28, 1963, King presented his now famous speech in Washington DC. The following is an excerpt from his speech:

“I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

“I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

“I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character. I have a dream today.

“I have a dream that one day down in Alabama with its vicious racists, with its governor having his lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification, one day right down in Alabama little Black boys and Black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and white girls as sisters and brothers. I have a dream today.”

It was on January 4 Martin Luther King, Jr. was killed: murdered. According to stanford.edu, “At 6:05 P.M. on Thursday, 4 April 1968, Martin Luther King was shot dead while standing on a balcony outside his second-floor room at the Lorraine Motel in Memphis, Tennessee. News of King’s assassination prompted major outbreaks of racial violence, resulting in more than 40 deaths nationwide and extensive property damage in over 100 American cities.”

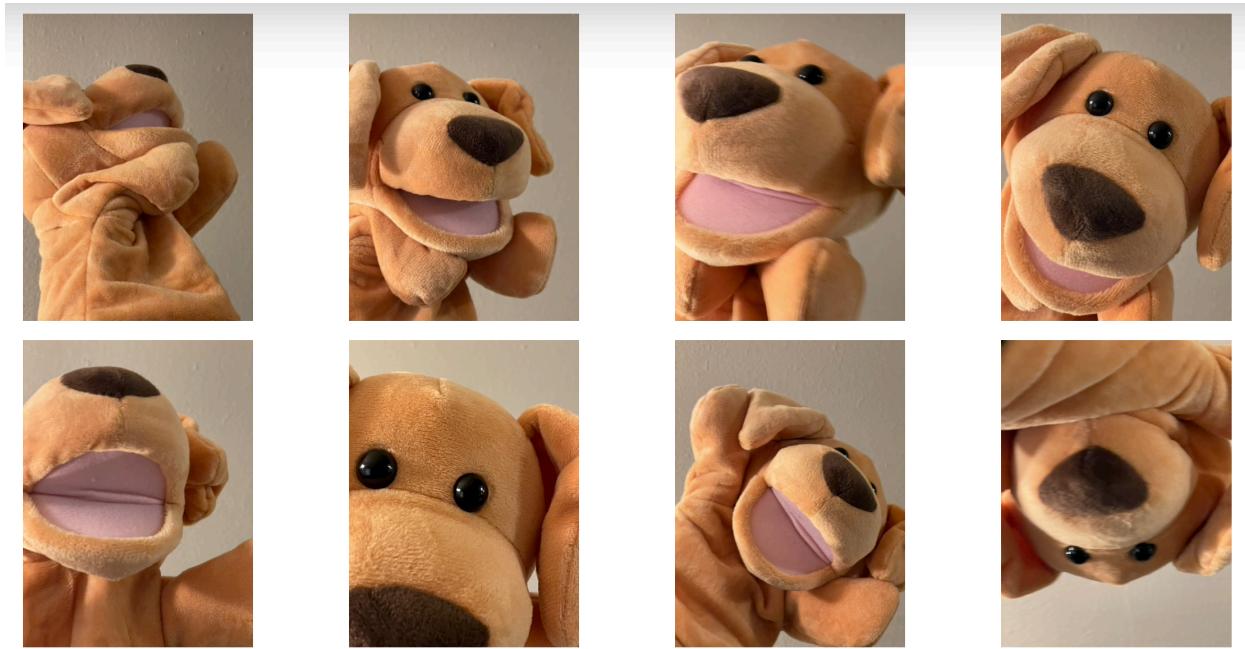

I don't know whether or not my life has been impacted by the life of Martin Luther King, Jr. What I do know is that, when we have a dream, it can, whether we realize it or not, take on a life and a character of its own. And, if this dream is big enough, it can spread to others and it can survive even the death of the one who dreamed it. I believe that this is the case with King and his dream.

Are there still prejudices and injustices. Yes, but statistics show that — at least in recent history, men and women tend to kill people of their own race. Blacks, among others have long been opposed, not by white people, but people who feel that they are, for whatever reason, superior to others. It could be money, or social status. I don't know. And, yes, there are still racially motivated groups that lurk in the dark crevices of society. I'm sure that we will never get rid of these groups of people. But God loves them, too, in spite of any hate that they may feel towards anyone else.

The question isn't, "what are others doing," but "what am I doing?" Am I doing everything I can do to let others — whoever their race or social status, know that they are loved, accepted and appreciated? If not, maybe that could be one of your goals for the month of April. And, who knows, you may not want to stop at the end of the month.

Dog Appreciation Month

An Interview with Rolf the Dog

April is Dog Appreciation Month, at least in the United States of America. I had a chance to speak with Rolf the Dog, and ask him what he thought about the holiday.

Rolf: "It's about time,. Dogs have long been under appreciated."

Me: "Sorry, Rolf. Is there anything I can do to make up for it."

Rolf: "T-bone. You know, steak. I'll make it easy. You don't even have to cook it."

Me: "How about a ham bone from the freezer?"

Rolf: "I'm leaving. Are you serious? How about some Wagyu beef?"

Me: "T-bone it is."

Rolf: "And champegne?"

Me: "No."

Rolf and I met mid 2022, and we've been tight ever since. It seems that Rolf can't do anything without me. Mostly, he wants me to take his picture. These pictures go on my website, www.llgt.cafe, on Instagram and on my Facebook page. People think Rolf is cute, but I know the real Rolf.

Rolf is currently working on jokes for a comedy show, which the two of us hope to have available some time in the near future. While Rolf is working on finding his "voice", I've been busy working on other projects. It's like I'm juggling a lot of projects at the same time. Like juggling balls, I can only work on one for so long before moving on to the next one. The "cleaning" ball seems to have gotten lost – mostly for lack of interest. Also, there are a number of things that I need easy access to, or I forget that I have them.

Me: "Can you tell me one of your jokes, Rolf?"

Rolf: "Why didn't the chick cross the road?"

Me: "Why?"

Rolf: "Because he was chicken."

Me: "Do you have any plans for Dog Appreciation Month, Rolf?"

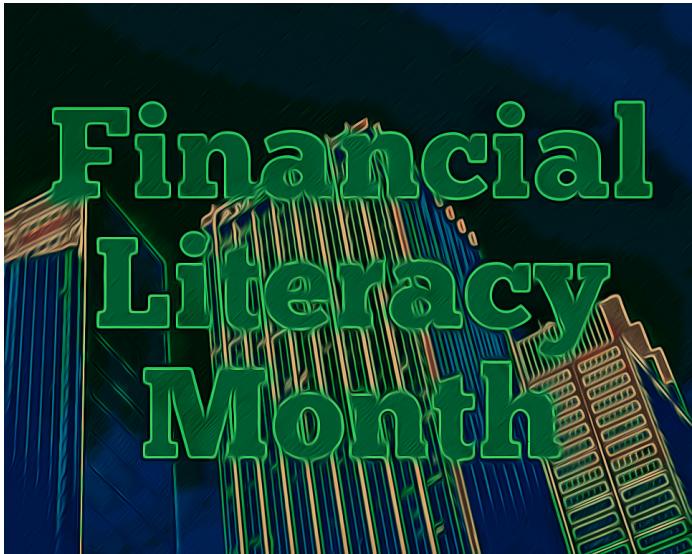

Rolf: "I have a date with a lady friend. She's a German shepherd. She spent four years in the Royal Air Force before getting out. Girl – dog: that makes her – a –? She's a Vet. She was wounded in combat once."

Me: "Does she have a Purple Heart?"

Rolf: "Ew, how would I know?"

Me: "Never mind. Thank you for joining me, Rolf."

I'll let you know when Rolf's video becomes available.

With April being Financial Literacy Month, here are some terms that you may (or may not) wish to know. Your life won't depend on knowing these terms, unless you work in finances, and you won't be quizzed at the end of the magazine.

Some of these terms may be specific to businesses. If you need help with your finances, it may be best to seek the help of professional.

401 and 401k — These were established by the US government as a way in which individuals are allowed to set aside money for retirement. Money that is set aside in one of these investments is not taxed at the time that it is earned but at the time that it is used or removed from the account. Many employers will do the work for their employees of setting up a 401k, and many will match employees contributions up to a certain percentage. Note, early withdrawals from this account (ie, before the age of 65) are more heavily taxed by the IRS.

Accounts Payable — These are the accounts that you pay money to. For an individual, it may include things like a phone or electric bill, groceries and so on. For a business, this includes vendors, venues, rent, taxes, any employees and so on.

Accounts Receivable — These are the accounts that give us money. It may be an employer, revenue from a book publisher or money from the sale of something on eBay. For a business, this may be customers, suppliers who buy from our business to sell to others, loans paid back by borrowers and so on.

Annuity — This is a fixed income paid annually to an individual after retirement. The funds come out of an annuity account that is set up, usually, long before retirement.

APR — The APR or Annual Percentage Rate is the rate of interest that an individual or business pays on loans. It is also the rate that a bank pays to some of its account holders. The more money that is held in a bank, the higher the interest rate that it will receive. The amount of interest that one pays to borrow will almost always be tighter than that which the bank pays to the account holder, the exception being short term 0% interest rates.

Assets — These are things that people or companies own that have some financial value. For an individual, this may be a car. For a business, it may be a fleet of trucks. Businesses may also have intangible assets, such as brand names, patents and a customer base.

Balance Sheet — This is a printable document that gives a quick view of a companies or individuals net worth at any given time. It is a report of both assets and current liabilities.

Bankruptcy — This is a process set up by the federal government by which a company or individual may “start over.” It allows for the removal of debt so that it does not have to be paid back and is used in cases where a company or individual is unable to pay back debt. Bankruptcy laws very greatly from state to state and it is a good idea to seek legal help if you find yourself in need of such.

Bonds — A bond, or bonds, is a loan given to a company or government. A $50 bond, for example, may cost $35 at the time of purchase and may be redeemed for $50 after a period of, for example, two years.

Collateral — This is an item that is held by a bank or other financial institution in the event that that borrower cannot pay back a loan. It may be a car, high end jewelry or a house. Pawn shops take smaller items for collateral for smaller loans.

Credit Limit — A credit limit is the upper limit set by a bank or credit card company that a business or individual may spend on credit. And a bank or creditor may impose fees if this upper limit is passed.

Debt Consolidation — This is a loan that is offered by institutions like banks that allow for high-interest debts to be consolidated into one (hopefully) lower loan. It should not be used to clear out credit cards for other purchases.

FICO Score — The FICO score is a score that rates a companies or individuals repayment history that other loaning institutions may refer to when making loans. There are three companies that collect information and provide a credit score and a credit report: TransUnion, Equifax and Experian.

Guarantor — This is someone who says that they will take responsibility for a loan if the initial party is unable to pay the loan back. The book of Proverbs in the Bible clearly advises against guaranteeing anyone else’s loan.

Interest Rate — This is the percentage that a bank or other financial institution pays out on interest bearing accounts.

Liquid Assets — These are assets that an individual or business owns that can quickly be traded for cash, such as stocks or bonds. These days, many of these items can be sold online or with a phone call. Non-liquid assets might include things like furniture, jewelry, paintings or a vehicle.

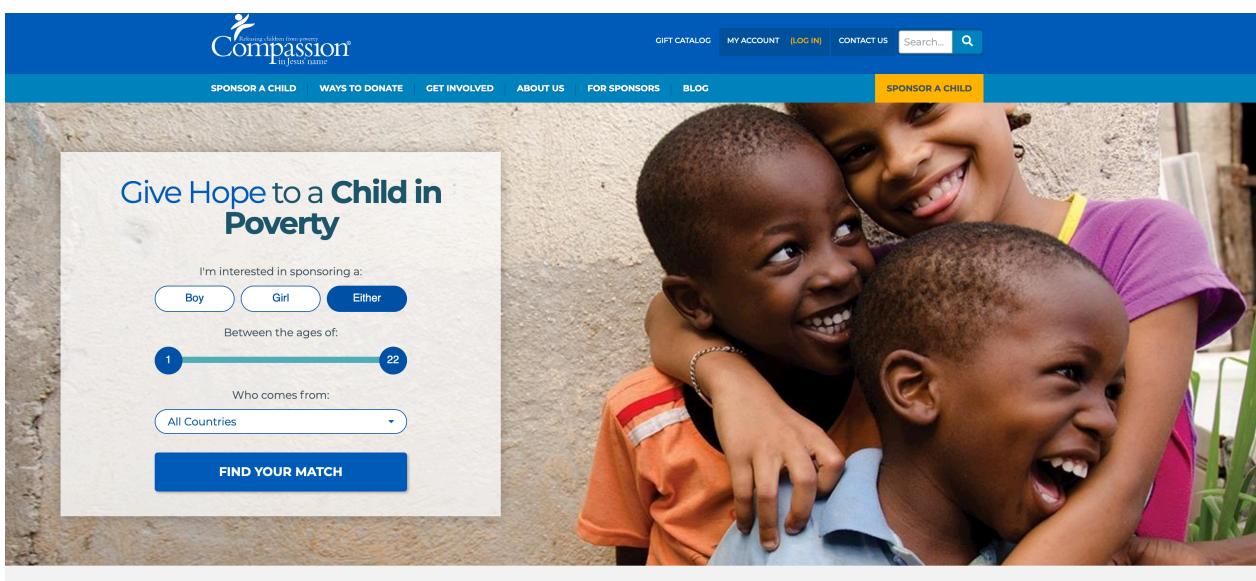

Net Income — This is the amount of money that one earns after taxes, insurance and investments are taken out: AKA take home pay.

Net Worth — For a business or an individual, this is what is owned minus what is owed.

Revenue — This is income, usually associated with a business.

Secured Loan — This is a loan that is secured by tangible assets.

There is one other word that may come in handy when it comes to finances, whether it be personal or business finances. That word is accountability. Finances is one area that it's far too easy to get wrong. And with business finances, there can be legal issues that can quickly turn into a bad situation. Either way, if you find that you need to be accountable with your finances, find someone you trust and ask them for their help. The worse they can say is no.

April is celebrated as Informed Woman Month in the US, with the goal of creating a society in which stereotypes are disproved and women are given the tools to understand and appreciate their own value.

Picture a society in which women are free to make their own decisions, where they have equal access to high-quality education and appropriate medical care, and that's the kind of future that this day works to make a reality.

Informed Woman Month celebrates women's empowerment and social roles. This month began in 1908. In New York City, 15,000 women protested, demanding greater wages, working hours, voting rights, and other women's rights.

Informed Woman Month empowers women to study and experience the globe. In 1911, attempts to empower women evolved into Informed Woman Month. In 1975, the United Nations recognized Women's Day in April to build a brighter future for women and honor their prior rights struggles.

This is a holiday that is especially well-liked by women since it affords them the opportunity to indulge in activities such as going to the spa, painting portraits, or spending time at the beach. Now is the ideal time to shower a special lady in your life with lavish gifts.

Eliminates Gender Inequality

Women can be incredibly formidable and invincible. This month can help women become more self-aware so that they may realize that they are great creatures and cannot be enslaved by gender parity.

This belief spreads to everyone else as well. This knowledge is contributing to the reduction of sexual assaults and other forms of sexual misconduct against women.

This day is celebrated to encourage women to pursue their ambitions and have pleasure in their life. It is often held that many women who are married as children do not live to see adulthood.

As a result, we commemorate this day to encourage people to feel that they still have a chance of achieving their objectives. The purpose of the celebration of Informed Woman Month is to make women aware that they have the freedom to choose activities that will bring them joy.

Here are some things you might do to celebrate Informed Women's Month. Do things that she loves, even if it means going to look at clothes, or digging in the garden. Honor the accomplishments of powerful women who have fought for their rights and give them awards to strengthen their self-assurance. They will be more likely to improve their standing in society by actively participating in social activities as a result of this encouragement.

Spread the word. People are encouraged to host a variety of seminars and conferences centered on the topic of women's contributions to the construction of society throughout the month of April. Inspire children to grow to their full potential and discover the world on their own.

Develop initiatives to be implemented in places of learning that encourage women and girls to continue their education and keep themselves abreast of current events across the world.

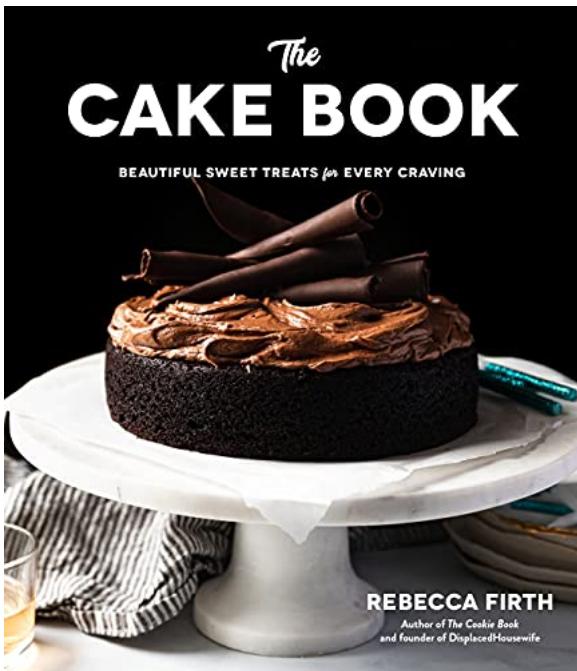

As a solution to the issue of women's low employment rates, we should encourage women to pursue careers that are traditionally held by males. This can also be accomplished by granting financial assistance to female students of disadvantaged communities.

National Pecan Day

April 14, 2023 is National Pecan Day. Pecans are great, not only by themselves, they can be used in so many dishes from salads to cookies.

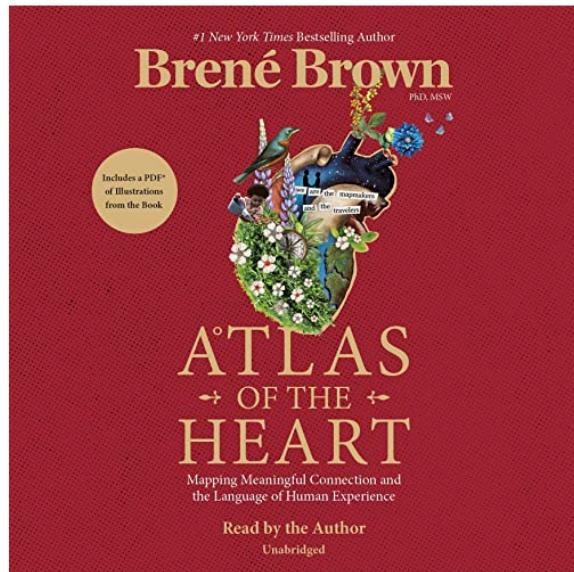

There's no official way to celebrate National Pecan Day, so there's really no wrong way to celebrate.

I like to eat pecans as a snack. Maybe you have some ideas of your own. You can get your pecans from Amazon with the link below.

I Choose

As a photographer, there's nothing I enjoy more than going out and taking pictures, looking for just the right moment, or that single flower, nearly lost in a background of snow and ice.

As a person, I often look for the best in others. If you try, it's not too hard. Some times, it's harder than others. Some people are just looking to push others away and, whether they realize it or not, even they have admirable qualities.

I choose to see the best because that's what I like, and it's a part of who I am. I like Breightling watches, and Mercedes Benz, not because I can afford either, but because they are, in my opinion, some of the best. I choose to see the best in others, because, contrary to popular opinion, a first impression is not always right.

I've seen people who gave a negative first impression and turned out to be pretty nice and I've seen people who made a positive first impressions who later acted like total jerks.

I believe in first, second and third chances. And you know what matters most in my choice to see the best. I choose.

I don't let others, popular opinion, television, news medial or even social media tell me that to think. I don't let the any of these tell me what to think, what to fear, who to like or dislike, who to trust or mistrust. They can have their input but, in the end, I choose. As my friends might tell me, I don't even let the weather or a forecast of "nasty" keep me from going out and taking pictures.

Yes, I look for, and often find the best. My problem is that I know myself a little too well. I know every mistake I make, every sinful thought that I think, and every time that I fail. I know the person that I want to be and I know that I ain't that guy. Who is it hardest to see the best in? Me.

It's easy to see the worst in ourselves. And how does it often come out? We see it most in others. My sister taught me that the quality that we least like in others is likely the quality that we least like in ourselves. It's something to think about when we accuse someone else of being rude, impatient or bitter.

I've been quite fortunate lately. I've been able to spend time with at least one person who sees the best in me. And it's helping me too see some of the best in me, too. Don't get me wrong, I'm still not the man that I want to be, but at least I can see that there's some good inside of me, even if it's not me but the indwelling Holy Spirit.

What do you choose to see? I heard a story about two men who were waling trough town. One was, I'll guess, from that town. The other was a native American. (Continued next page)

In the conversation, the native American spoke of the things that his people saw or heard as compared with the people of the other man.

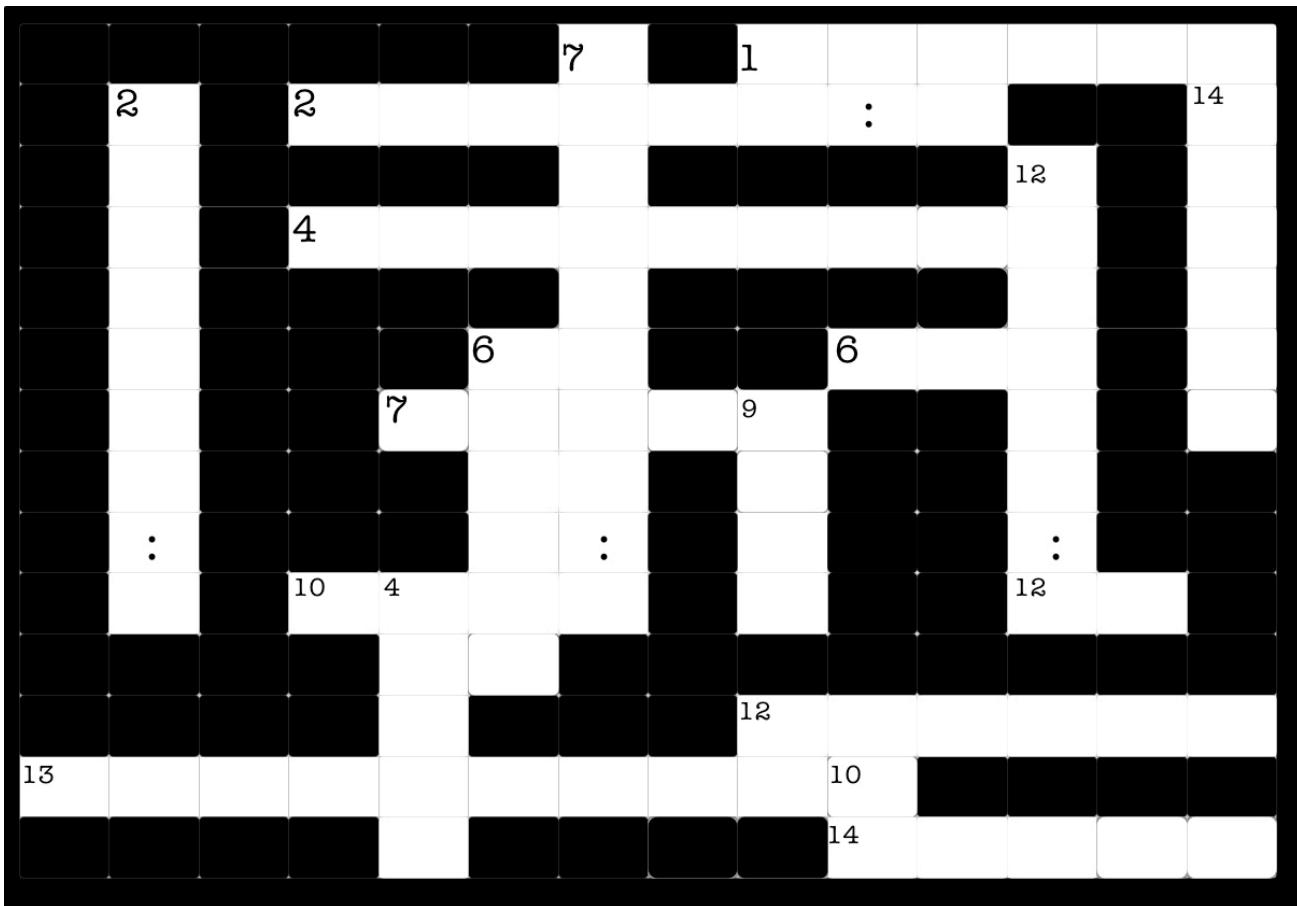

To illustrate, he dropped a handful of coins on the ground and, immediately, several people turned around. After that illustration, the native American man asked his friend if he heard the cricket. His friend could not. But, as he began to listen, he could. The moral of the story is that we focus, not on everything, but only the things that matter to us: the things that we train ourselves to focus on. Are we letting others tell us what's important, or do we make that choice, ourselves?

A Good Day for a Picnic

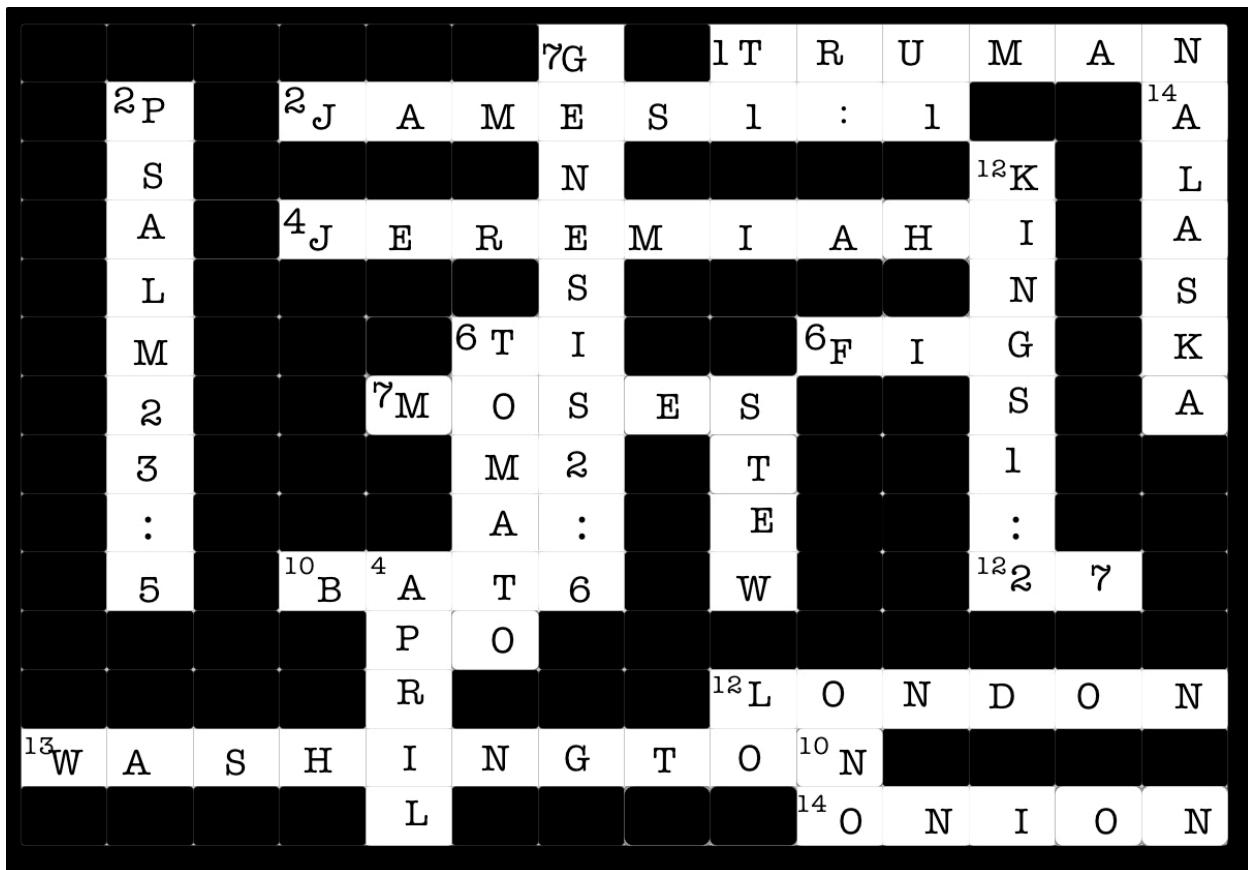

April 23 is National Picnic Day. If the weather is nice enough, and you have some place you can celebrate, such as a back yard, now might be a good time to enjoy the great outdoors.

If you don't have the food that you need on hand, you should be able to find it at your local grocery: fried chicken or burgers and hotdogs, fresh fruit, chips and potato salads, along with numerous beverages to choose from. You might be able to order ahead, and you may even be able to have something delivered.

While celebrating National Picnic Day, you could also observe German Beer Day with some Hefeweizen, Erdinger or Schlenkerla. Perhaps you could have a piece of cheesecake to celebrate National Cherry Cheesecake Day.

No plans to go outside? Maybe you could have an indoor picnic. Or maybe you just want to celebrate one of the other holidays. Have some ideas of your own? Please share them. And if you decide to have a picnic, don't forget to invite your Teddy bear.
